

Forward March
April – 2012
TERMINAL DISEASES AND HOMEOPATHY

Death is a beginning of new life. It is an eternal truth of life. Without destroying the old, new cannot be created. An individual is born and during the journey of life, come across different colour of life,, joy, anguish, pain, suffering and then a moment arrives when he becomes overburdened, during this time a transformation is needed catharsis is required which is death. Sigmund Freud, Famous psychologist in his later years of life revealed that death is a basic instinct of an individual. He termed it as thanatos or death instinct. During his whole life he was concentrated with the idea of life and its need like food, water and sex. But this was something strange which he discovered. Strange but true. Without suffering there can be no compassion, without hate there can be no love and without death there can be no life. It is like destroying the garbage which we accumulate over a period of life. When it is destroyed our soul; becomes pure.

But today in this modern Diaspora we are born unaware, unconscious and we die unaware. Efforts are being made to save lives even during the terminal stages of deadly diseases.

Anaesthesia is given to avoid the sufferings and a person dies without experiencing the bliss of the moment.

Why don't we allow it to happen? The more we escape more strongly it comes to the surface.

Concept of painless delivery is not a new one. But the offspring, the species which is born with this method how strong is it? Is it worth to survive in the adverse circumstances of life? It is a well known fact that it is not only the mother who suffers with pain during labour but the pain suffered by a child is more intense. And this pain is an equipment to prepare the child so that it can face the challenges of life outside the mother's womb. Labour is also a terminal stage for both the mother and the child because both swing between a narrow line of life and death. Statistics have shown that Mother Mortality Rate and Infant Mortality Rate have decreased considerably. But at what cost? Children are being born handicapped, autistics with congenital deformities and psychological disorder. We are weighing life according to statistics. Quantity has increased but at the cost of quality.

Terminal diseases like cancer and AIDS are the outcome of everything which we accumulate in our system like toxins, drugs, emotions, temper, and suppressions. Body tries to maintain equilibrium by throwing it, by localizing it on a specific organ. It is a body's immune response or a defensive mechanism to maintain homeostasis but its further suppression causes the immune system to act more strongly and vigorously against it resulting in such diseases. Ultimately death occurs.

Homeopathy can provide a way so that this accumulation of toxins does not take place in the body. It helps the body to throw out the rubbish by means of discharge, eruption haemorrhoids, fever etc. It creates a vent to release the toxins. If at all an individual suffer from such terminal diseases owing to his habits and constitutions then it aims to lessen the sufferings of the patient by acting as a palliative and provides a route for an individual to pass through the death consciously and with dignity.

